Summary and plan for the proceeding 11.30 – 12.45

- How can we understand and define “compensation” when sites with cultural values and architectural qualities become changed by planning processes?
- Is compensation in a context of cultural environments above all a process, a question of negotiations among key actors in planning?
- Is compensation as alterations of cultural heritage first of all a product, results of negotiations in planning in order to solve problems and make the land approved for exploitation?
 - Are cultural compensation measures, methods and tools, methods and/or measures for reconstruction of damage on cultural values and architectural qualities in planning?
